Housing and Residential Communities Community Living Standards

There are 4 Community Living Standards that residents are expected to uphold while living in campus housing. The Community Living Standards are broken down into more specific Residence Hall Policies.

These Community Living Standards were developed to help provide a safe and secure community. Violations that compromise the safety and security of residents may result in contract termination and other appropriate disciplinary sanctions.

I. Intellectual Environment

You are responsible for creating an environment that promotes the academic mission of the university. This includes upholding the noise and visitation policies in the residence halls, and being held responsible for your visitors and guests' behavior.

II. Facility Issues

You are responsible for promoting a clean and well-maintained living environment. It is expected that students will not damage or vandalize university property or remove property from its designated location in the residence halls. You are responsible for promoting and maintaining a safe and secure environment in the residence halls. It is expected that you will not prop open doors or allow unescorted guests into the residence halls and adhere to fire safety guidelines.

III. Civility

You are responsible for respecting the rights of all others in the residence hall community, and to act with civility at all times. Fighting, threats, and intimidation of any person for any reason will not be tolerated. You are responsible for developing and maintaining an atmosphere that promotes social awareness, social appreciation and acceptance of those who may be different from you (it is an expectation that you actively participate in conflict resolution).

IV. Substances

You are responsible for upholding federal, state, and local laws dealing with alcohol, tobacco (smoking is not permitted in any residence hall) and other drugs. Simply put, alcohol is not permitted for students less than 21 years of age, and illegal drugs are not permitted by anyone within the residence halls
