If any discrepancies exist between official University of Texas at Arlington printed materials and electronic information, the information in the printed material shall have precedence unless the electronic information specifically states that it is the official source in lieu of the printed information.

Designated Agent to Receive Notification of Claimed Copyright Infringement

At The University of Texas at Arlington, Web pages are created according to specifications provided by departments, offices, or individuals. These pages are approved by their requestors before the pages are made publicly accessible. All text and images contained in these pages is original material or public domain, and if any part of a page is known to be otherwise, the creator of the page should be contacted to resolve the matter.

While every effort is made to be sure that no material under external copyright is improperly used in UTA Web pages, it is impossible to verify originality on every item presented for inclusion in a page. UTA's limit to remedy any incident of mistaken use of protected material is to remove such material from all pages which contain it. Every Web publisher at UTA is responsible for following the UT System policy on copying copyrighted materials and intellectual property.

Opinions expressed on any Web pages which are accessible from any server on UTA's domain are not necessarily those of UTA, and information of any type should be verified by direct contact with appropriate University officials for accuracy and timeliness.

Some Web servers on UTA's domain may permit the storage of personal home pages; neither UTA nor its employees can be responsible for the content of such

Regents Rules and Regulations:

Web publishers at UT Arlington are expected to abide by all rules established by the UT System Board of Regents. The complete Regents Rules and Regulations are published on the UT System Web. For the convenience of UTA Web publishers, the rules most applicable are extracted here. This list, however, is not exhaustive. Also, you should talk to your Dean or Department Head for further guidance.
